

How does our History curriculum support British Values, SMSC and our whole school MPA values?

Democracy 	The Rule of Law 	Individual Liberty 	Tolerance and mutual respect
History lessons can bring to life the story of how democracy evolved across different times, societies and cultures. For example, by exploring how the Ancient Greeks established their democratic system, children can appreciate the foundations of democracy and the importance of having a voice in decision-making. Class debates on historical events can foster an understanding of different viewpoints and enhance their engagement in democracy today.	The study of the rule of law can be illustrated through examining how ancient societies, such as the Greeks and Romans, elected leaders to establish laws. By investigating the processes used by civilisations, children can gain insight into the importance of structured governance and the role laws play in maintaining order and justice. This understanding helps students recognise that laws exist to protect individual freedoms and support a community's well-being.	Students can learn about individual liberty through significant historical figures and modern examples. For instance, they can study the efforts of young activists like Greta Thunberg, who advocate for climate action and the right to be heard. Her activism exemplifies the importance of freedom of speech and the power of individuals to inspire change. Additionally, examining individual liberties during World War II, such as the struggles faced by those fighting against totalitarian regimes, highlights the need for freedom and human rights. These accounts encourage students to understand the value of their own voice and the importance of standing up for their beliefs and world views.	History is filled with stories of individuals and communities that have thrived in diversity. By examining the impact of various cultures and religions throughout British history, students can learn the importance of tolerance and mutual respect. Studies on influential multicultural figures can promote understanding and friendship among peers.

How does our History curriculum support British Values, SMSC and our whole school MPA values?

SMSC stands for Spiritual, Moral, Social, and Cultural development, which refers to the broader personal development of children and young people. It encompasses a wide range of values, beliefs, and experiences that shape an individual's identity and understanding of the world around them. SMSC is a crucial aspect of education, as it helps children and young people develop a strong sense of self and an awareness of their place in society.

Spiritual  Spiritual	Moral  Moral	Social  Social	Cultural  Cultural
In History, we explore significant events and figures that shape our understanding of the world around us. Lessons on ancient civilisations like the Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, and Mayans can prompt discussions about beliefs, values, and the quest for meaning in life. Children can reflect on how these beliefs influence contemporary society and their own lives, allowing them to develop a sense of connection with historical narratives.	History is brimming with moral lessons. Discussing the impacts of environmental activism, like the efforts of Greta Thunberg, can engage students in moral reasoning regarding climate change and their responsibilities towards the planet. Additionally, exploring the moral dilemmas faced during World War II, such as the choices made by individuals and governments, encourages students to think critically about right and wrong, helping them to form their own opinions on ethical issues and civil responsibility.	History opens the door to understanding social structures and relationships across different time periods. By examining the theme of Toys, we can learn about childhood across the ages and how it reflects societal changes. Lessons on Seaside past and present illustrate the evolving nature of leisure and family life. The transformation of Mablethorpe High Street shows how communities adapt to society's needs over time. Additionally, studying ancient civilisations reveals how societies were organised, with leaders at the top and various occupations below, helping children appreciate the importance of social order and community.	Incorporating various cultural perspectives within history lessons enriches students' understanding of diversity. By studying the contributions of different cultures to British history, like the impact of the Romans for example, we can promote respect for different backgrounds and traditions. Furthermore, exploring studies that highlight how different cultures have influenced the fabric of British society today deepens students' appreciation for the multicultural landscape in which they live. This not only broadens their horizons but also cultivates an understanding of the interconnectedness of our global community.

How does our History curriculum support British Values, SMSC and our whole school MPA values?

Be Honest 	Be Kind 	Be Positive 	Be Resilient 	Be Aspirational 	Be Respectful
In history, honesty is key. We encourage our students to seek the truth and engage with historical narratives critically. By assessing evidence and questioning sources, our pupils think like historians and develop a foundation for integrity, which is invaluable both in academia and life.	Kindness is essential when discussing historical events and figures. We teach students to empathise with people from different times and cultures, fostering an environment where everyone feels valued. Understanding diverse perspectives cultivates compassion and respect.	We strive to create a positive learning atmosphere where curiosity thrives. History can often be challenging, but we encourage our students to approach it with an optimistic mindset. Celebrating achievements and recognising progress helps everyone maintain their enthusiasm for learning.	History is filled with examples and stories of challenges and struggles, providing excellent opportunities for our students to learn about resilience. We encourage pupils to persist when faced with difficult topics or complex concepts, developing skills that will help them overcome obstacles both in and out of the classroom.	We inspire our students to aspire to be better citizens by learning from the past. By exploring historical figures who made a difference, we motivate them to think about their place in the world and how they can contribute positively to society.	Respect for different cultures and historical narratives is vital. We guide our pupils to honour diverse perspectives and learn from them, fostering an inclusive environment that celebrates all of humanity's stories. Pupils show respect to each other when considering different interpretations and perspectives of the Historical narrative studied and discuss these showing a respect for others' opinions and viewpoints.